Dr. Toms Krūmiņš is a Senior Associate at COBALT working in the Litigation and Dispute Resolution practice group. He is a renowned arbitration expert in Latvia, specializing in International and European Law, particularly Private International Law and International Civil Procedure, Commercial and Investment Arbitration, as well as Human Rights Law and Constitutional Law. Toms has represented clients in numerous international (for example, ICC) and national arbitration proceedings, and successfully acted before the Constitutional Court of Latvia, the Supreme Court of Latvia, the Court of Justice of the European Union, as well as helped clients to succeed before the European Court of Human Rights.

Toms holds a Ph.D. degree from the University of Copenhagen. His research focused on the dichotomy between arbitration and human rights, in particular the interplay between setting-aside proceedings and parties' procedural human rights under the European Convention on Human Rights.

Toms has authored or co-authored many publications, including a monograph 'Arbitration and Human Rights' (2020) published by Springer. He regularly speaks on topics related to arbitration, private international law and international civil procedure.
